

You're Invited!

Stone Age Wisdom in the 21st Century: Using Traditional Healing Circles to Resolve Modern Day Disputes

Thursday, November 29, 2007 ■ 3:00 – 5:00 pm
Lost Nation Theater, 39 Main Street (City Hall), Montpelier, VT

The Montpelier Community Justice Center is joining with the Kellogg-Hubbard Library to present an afternoon workshop with Angaangaq, an internationally respected Eskimo-Kalaallit elder from Greenland. Angaangaq will be in Montpelier to participate in the Kellogg-Hubbard Library's Fall Series focusing on the adaptation of the Inuit to globalization and climate change. Angaangaq has worked with communities and individuals in polar regions throughout the world, using "healing circles" and ceremonies to resolve interpersonal and community conflict. His involvement in the Canadian criminal justice system—in prisons and in First Nation communities—has been influential in helping victims and offenders rebuild their lives. Angaangaq's skills as a healer and storyteller will be showcased in this 2-hour workshop designed for anyone interested in Restorative Justice.

This is sure to be a fun and enlightening afternoon. There is no charge for this workshop, but reservations are a must!

Reserve your space now by calling Judy Gibson at 802-223-9606 or email:
jgibson@montpelier-vt.org

Sponsored by:

Montpelier
Community Justice
Center restoring relations